Not illustrated. 1878 Excerpt: ...Sorrow and love partake. Sorrow, for I have sorrowd much Over thy sins and shame; Love, for My love is given to such As think upon My name. Thee will I clothe in raiment white, And give thee a white stone; Dear shall thy name be in His sight, By whom tis read alone. Thou shalt have place in this My heart And hear My heaven-sweet call; Behold Me offerd, take thy part In loves unending all. I will kneel down, and Thee my whole Accept, since Thou art won; There is great silence in my soul As glory were begun;--I will kneel down for my new name, To thank Thee and to pray, Preserve it, Saviour, free from blame Until the judgment day;-- I will kneel down, in white robes clad, And from its bordering sod, Drink of the river that makes glad The city of my God. EVENING. Man goeth forth to his work and to his labour till the evening. The sun is gone, the long clouds break And sink adown his golden wake; Behold us, met now work is done To seek Thy grace at evensong. Half-hearted, tardy, cold are we, Warm us, and draw our souls to Thee; Draw us to follow, as the sun, Thy servant, vassal worlds draws on. Break to us, dealer of mans bread, Food fresh from heaven as manna spread, Lest of the poisonous fruits of death Eat the sad soul that hungereth. We would not meagre gifts down-call When Thou dost yearn to yield us all; But for this life, this little hour, Ask all Thy love and care, and power. Show us Thy pureness, here, on earth; Into Thy kingdom give us birth. We would not wish or dare, to wait In better worlds a better state. But save us now, and cleanse us now, Receive each soul and hear its vow: My Fathers God, on Thee I call, Thou shalt be my God, and my All. I am the true Vine, and My
