Not illustrated. 1878 Excerpt: ...to trample downe all Law, and order, to fcorne obedience, to hate Loyalty, to contemne faith, truth, and honesty, to steale, robbe, plunder, wound, deflowre, ravish, imprifon, fine, begger, and murther all, that durst obey God in the obferving of the Procestant Religion, or be Loyall to the King in the obedience to him, and obfervation of the Lawes established. In a word, I quickly learnd the A rt of ignorance, the Mystery of iniquity, the Science of villany, the Society of Rebellion, the Vocation of Treafon, the function of hypocrisy, and the knavery of all Trades. I had an excellent memory to forget, to forgive any injury, and I was infusd with an admirable forgetfulnes, not to remember benefits received. Me thought he was but a Barren stirrellBraind Preacher, that could not rayl at the King, abufe my fuffering Lord, revile the State, and call the right Honourable Lords, wicked Councillors; I heard one at Roderhith (or Rcderriffe neare London) exhort the People on a Sunday, to be valiant and couragions in the Cause, that they ought not to stand in feare, or to be awed, cowed, or commanded, by the poiver or authority of any one man, nor should they be afraid to slieth their swords in tlubowells of him and his Posterity(whosoever he was) without respecl of Persons: and verily the man talkd exceedingly edifying. I was taken mightily with his doctrine, and so were many more of the Brethren and Sisters at that time, in that fancimonious Congregation. There was at the heaning of him one Taylor (whom some doejlyle, intitle, nominate, A 3 and and cognominate, the aquaticall, or Water-Poet) he (I fay) was so bold to fay then and there, on the day aforefaid, in the place aforefaid,

that the Preacher aforefaid, that prated the Lecture aforefaid, was worthy to be...
