

Dubliners

Join us for a collection of fifteen classic short stories, by James Joyce, one of the 20th Century's most influential writers, in what the author himself described as a chapter in the moral history of Ireland. These tales form a naturalistic depiction of life in the Irish middle class during the early 1900s, in a time when the Emerald Isle was searching for a national identity. Joyce is able to take narrative where it has never been before.
