

Emma

Emma Woodhouse is an intelligent and beautiful young woman who lives with her elderly, hypochondriac father in their massive English estate. Emma has just witnessed the wedding of her former governess to a Mr. Weston. Emma takes credit to the couples newfound happiness because she introduced them, and therefore begins a haphazard career in matchmaking. She shares her plans with her friend and neighbor, Mr. Knightley, who warns her not to meddle in other peoples affairs. Emma is headstrong and spoiled and sets out to match her naive friend, Harriet, with the local vicar, Mr. Elton. Unfortunately, Emma has misread Mr. Eltons intentions, not realizing that he wishes to make Emma his bride. Harriet is heartbroken and Emma, who has no wish to marry anyone, is distraught. Still, Emma carries on, intent on finding a match for Harriet. Things become increasingly complicated with the arrival of a dashing young man named Frank Churchill who immediately sets his eyes on Emma. Though Emma doesn't feel anything for Frank, she acquiesces to his advances, upsetting the lovely Jane Fairfax and Mr. Knightley, who has taken an instant disliking to Frank. In the meantime, Harriet announces her interest in Mr. Knightley, and Emma finds she doesn't like this notion one bit. Could it be that she cares for Mr. Knightley? And has her meddling and unfounded relationship with Frank Churchill ruined her own chances of happiness?
