

Frankenstein

Victor Frankenstein was the product of a supportive wealthy family that encouraged ambition and dedication to pushing oneself to the extreme to achieve greater understanding of all around him. From early boyhood Frankenstein obsessed on theories of science that promoted creating natural wonders. As a college student the new technique of galvanism caught Frankenstein's attention and he began his experiment in creating a living being from golem. Through a chemical process never to be revealed lest someone else attempt it the student gives life to his creation. Frankenstein is so horrified by the creature's appearance that he flees and requires the nursing of Henry Clerval to recover from the traumatic experience. Frankenstein has been adapted to films, plays, and musicals. Countless people all over the world have enjoyed one version or another of the story of Frankenstein.
