

The temptation of Saint Anthony: 1910

It was in the Thebaid, upon a mountain height and a space in the shape of a half-moon, shut in by great rocks. The cabin of the hermit occupied the centre. It was made of mud and of reeds. It had a flat roof and no door. Inside there could be seen a jug and a black loaf, also, upon a wooden stand, a great book. Upon the floor, here and there, were two or three pieces of matting, a basket and a knife. Ten paces from the hermits hut there was a long cross planted in the ground, and at the other end of the platform an old twisted palm-tree leaned over the abyss, for the mountain was sharply shaped and the Nile seemed like a lake at the bottom of the cliffs.
