Not illustrated. 1890 Excerpt: ... Greece: though the words Aonio deducam vertice Musas need not imply more than Ascraeumque cano Romana per oppida carmen (G. ii. 176)--i.e., the imitation and adaptation of Greek models. The only recorded visit of Virgil to Greece is that at the end of his life: but there is some difficulty in connecting with this the ode (i. 3) in which Horace speaks of the visit of his friend Vergilius to Attica, and an earlier visit is at any rate possible. 4. The remaining ten years of Virgil's life (29-19 B.C.) were devoted to the Aeneid, the most enduring monument not only of his own fame, but of the fortunes of Rome; the epic of the Roman empire; the sacred book of the Roman religion, as summed up in the conception of Tortuna Urbis, with its visible embodiment in the person of the Emperor; the expression of all the varied beliefs of the time--national, religious, historical, mythological; the Gesta Populi Romani, as some called it on its first appearance. Ten or twelve years before, as we learn from Eel. vi. 3-5, Virgil had thought of singing reges et proelia; but the idea of an epic poem did not probably take definite shape in his mind before 29 B.C., in which year he writes (G. iii. 46-48) that he intends to celebrate Caesars exploits. In the year 26 B.C., Augustus, then absent on a campaign in Spain, wrote to ask for a sight of the first draft of the poem or of selected passages from it: Virgil replied that he had not yet completed anything worthy of his great undertaking or of the Emperors ears: but three or four years after he consented to read three books (Aen. iv, vi and another) to the Emperor, the date being approximately determined by the death B.C. 23 of the young 1 The poets
