This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1873 Excerpt: ...that we cannot preach in vain. His heavenly word shall not return unto Him void, but shall prosper in the thing whereto He sent it. Still it is surely our duty to preach, whether men will hear, or whether they will forbear. We must preach, as our Lord enjoins in a text already quoted, as a witness. Accordingly He Himself, before the heathen Pilate, bore witness unto the truth; and St. Paul conjures us to keep our sacred charge as in the presence of Him, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession. Doubtless, His glory is set forth in some mysterious way in the rejection, as well as in the reception of the Gospel; and we must co-operate with Him. We must co-operate so far, as to be content to wound as well as to heal, to condemn as well as to absolve. We must not shrink from being a saviour from death unto death, as well as of life unto life. We must steadfastly believe, however painful may be the duty, that we are in either case offering up a sweet savour of Christ unto God both in them that are saved, and in them that perish. We must learn to acquiesce and concur in the order of Gods providence, and bear to rejoice over great Babylon and her inhabitants, when the wrath of God has fallen upon her. This consideration is an answer to those who would limit our message to what is influential and convincing in it, and measure its divinity by its success. But I have introduced it rather to show generally, how utterly we are in the dark about the whole subject; and therefore, as being in the dark, how necessary it is to gird our garments about us, and hold fast our treasure, and hasten forward, lest we betray our trust. We have no means of knowing how far a small ...
