

Sketches and Travels in London (Pocket Classics)

Excerpt from Sketches and Travels in London: Notes of a Journey From Cornhill to Grand Cairo The papers brought together under the head of Sketches and Travels in London were contributed to Punch from 1847 to 1850, over the signature of Spec, - except Going to See a Man Hanged, which had appeared in Frasers Magazine in 1840, but was added to the collection in the revised edition. Of this last Mr. Eyre Crowe speaks in his account of early days in the Coram Street house, and reflects the evidently deep impression of the experience Thackeray transmitted to those about him: He tossed on his pillow, thinking all night of the wretch Courvoisier, the Swiss valet, whose exit is described in Going to See a Man Hanged. The later sketches and travels were most of them written in the Young Street study; Mrs. Ritchie has described his method of work upon them there, and upon the drawings with which in most cases he accompanied them; his daughters helping him by preparing the woodblocks, and sometimes the boy from the Punch office waiting in the hall. Mrs. Ritchie confirms, too, the statement often made, that the original of Whitestock in The Curates Walk was her fathers old friend William Brookfield.
