Excerpt: ... Can centre in a little quiet nest All that desire would fly for through the earth; That can, the world eluding, be itself A world enjoyd; that wants no witnesses But its own sharers, and approving Heaven; That, like a flower deep hid in rocky cleft, Smiles, though tis looking only at the sky. From a Poem on the Death of the Princess Charlotte, by the Reverend Rann Kennedy, A.M. THE BROKEN HEART. BROKEN HEART. I never heard Of any true affection, but twas nipt With care, that, like the caterpillar, eats The leaves of the springs sweetest book, the rose. MIDULKTOJf. It is a common practice with those who have outlived the susceptibility of early feeling, or have been brought up in the gay heartlessness of dissipated life, to laugh at all love stories, and to treat the tales of romantic passion as mere fictions of novelists and poets. My observations on human nature have induced me to think otherwise. They have convinced me, that however the surface of the character may be chilled and frozen by the cares of the world, or cultivated into mere smiles by the arts of society, still there are dormant fires lurking in the depths of the coldest bosom, which, when once enkindled, become impetuous, and are sometimes desolating in their effects. Indeed, I am a true believer in the blind deity, and go to the full extent of his doctrines. Shall I confess it?--I believe in broken hearts, and the possibility of dying of disappointed love. I do not, however, consider it a malady often fatal to my own sex; but I firmly believe that it withers down many a lovely woman into an early grave. Man is the creature of interest and ambition. His nature leads him forth into the struggle and bustle of the world. Love is but the embellishment of his early life, or a song piped in ...
