

One day a wolverine was out walking on the hill-side, when, on turning a corner, he suddenly saw a large rock. Was that you I heard walking about just now? he asked, for wolverines are cautious animals, and always like to know the reasons of things. No, certainly not, answered the rock; I dont know how to walk. But I SAW you walking, continued the wolverine. I am afraid that you were not taught to speak the truth, retorted the rock. You need not speak like that, for I have SEEN you walking, replied the wolverine, though I am quite sure that you could never catch ME! and he ran a little distance and then stopped to see if the rock was pursuing him; but, to his vexation, the rock was still in the same place. Then the wolverine went up close, and struck the rock a blow with his paw, saying: Well, will you catch me NOW? I cant walk, but I can ROLL, answered the rock. And the wolverine laughed and said: Oh, that will do just as well; and began to run down the side of the mountain.
